OBJECTIVES AND STANDARDS

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This conference is designed to assist practicing clinicians in the optimal management and evaluation of cardiovascular disease, cerebrovascular disease, cancer screening, and renal disease. It will present challenges and can bring added value to their practice and explore new innovations in diagnostic methods. The expected outcome is that practicing clinicians will receive increased knowledge in the selected fields presented by experts, and will be able to increase knowledge, refine already employed techniques, and learn to apply new techniques for the improvement of practice and patient care.

We have developed several educational presentations for this meeting that are based on recent literature and are intended to close a gap in general clinician's understanding and management of stroke, cardiovascular disease, renal disease, and cancer screening.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion, the attendee should be able to:

- Improve patient care by assessing value of yoga in managing cardiovascular pathologies
- Improve patient care by assessing current and proper utilization of methods in cancer screening.
- Practice evidence-based medicine and follow the standard of care using minimally invasive surgery in brain.
- Practice evidence-based medicine and follow the standard of care in the prevention and management of primary cardiovascular disease.
- Practice evidence-based medicine and follow the standard of care in the prevention and management of drug induced renal disease.
